Ok. I won't weigh in very strongly because I'm new to this conversation, but FWIW I think Georgetown is better than UNF because:

- 1) Tuu6uuu 7th kk 6u7hey've got a lot of experience on this work – UNF doesn't – and I think being able to rapidly be effective is critical.
- 2) I'm not concerned about the branding issue for Georgetown. I think they could provide neutral-ish services and most people in the broader climate world don't know them particularly well.
- 3) I am concerned about the branding issue for UNF.

I will come to the DDP meeting tomorrow. Anything else I should know or prepare.

We've spent enough time thinking about this. It's going to take some time to stand up so Im hoping we pick a horse next week. CA doesn't like today's contestant.

I've got time tomorrow we can check in. Are you planning to join us for the DDP meeting tomorrow?

Have we set a timeline for decisionmaking? Do you want to chat about it briefly with me – maybe Frida - before we talk to the others?

Alexa and I are kicking the draft Govs @ COP23 doc around. Slightly different visions for it based on their first draft, I think (wasn't much of a pitch), but we'll get there.
